To this end, students will study a selection of the works (in translation) written by some of the most famous authors of the ancient world. The course is divided into three modules: History and Philosophy; Comedy; Satire.

CULTURAL STUDIES (CLTR)

Level I

CLTR1050 Aspects of Brazilian Culture I
This course is designed for the student with little or no background in Brazilian History and Culture. It approaches basic elements of Brazilian culture in order to understand the historical and cultural backgrounds and aspects of the “continental” country Brazil - the only Portuguese speaking country in the Americas. Different influences from Africa, Europe and Asia are critically analysed.

CLTR1501 Topics in African Cultural Traditions
This course explores the diversity of African cultural traditions. It begins with an exploration of African historiography and then turns to an examination of the dynamics of cultural change and development as a result of European imperialism and decolonisation. The course will rely heavily on an array of regional case studies, African literature, film and music to further explore a range of cultural practices on the continent. We will be especially concerned with understanding the cultural significance of the performative and creative arts in the construction of African identities.

CLTR1505 Cultural Studies and Caribbean Dance
The movement expressions of the Caribbean have often been problematically dubbed as “folk or ethnic dance”. Using conceptual frameworks provided by Cultural Studies this course explores the popular social dance forms of the Caribbean through a careful examination of the history and aesthetic principles that have guided their development and popularization. To this end, the course introduces students to a range of dance forms and later maps the stylisation process they undergo as they are moved from the streets into the studio and on to the stage.

CLTR1100 Culture and Identity
This course introduces students to the debates surrounding the formation of cultural identities. The course will demonstrate that both culture and identity are contested entities as students are shown the ways in which various, and oft times contradictory narratives of culture, shape the construct of identities. It will address such issues as the relation between culture as lived experience and institutional or sanctioned versions of ‘C’ulture. It will also examine the ways in which our sense of identity and belonging are formed as well as how new cultural texts emerge to subvert dominant ideologies.
Level II

CLTR2000 Approaches to the Study of Culture
This course introduces students to key concepts in the study of culture. Students will assess how culture is conceptualised and will analyse the approaches adopted by the various disciplines. Such concepts as high and low culture, mass culture and subculture will be examined, as well as the perspective of culture as the ordinary, or lived experience. Emphasis will be placed on reading culture as a text as students examine how culture and cultural practices are manifested. Consequently, students will focus, for example, on key practices within youth culture and in the media as they assess how the narrative of identity is constructed through the cultural text.

CLTR2050 Aspects of Brazilian Culture II
This course builds on CLTR1050 by providing students with a more in-depth examination of contemporary Brazilian culture and history. It foregrounds an analysis of popular cultural manifestations and examines how they intersect with broader issues of race, nation and gender. The different influences from Africa, Europe and Asia that have shaped the “continental” culture that developed in Brazil will also be critically analysed.

CLTR2010 Global Media and Caribbean Culture
In this course students will explore the ways in which the media shapes ideas about Caribbean culture, particularly Anglo-Caribbean culture. Drawing from readings in communication and cultural studies, as well as examples from a variety of mass media, the course examines the mass mediated production of Caribbean culture under three broad headings: Representations of the Caribbean, Media Flows into the Caribbean, and The Caribbean on the World Stage. This course takes a critical approach to the study of production, content and consumption of mass mediated messages about the Caribbean.

CLTR2100 Festivals, Rituals and Caribbean Society
In this course, students will examine the ways in which Caribbean festivals and rituals provide roots/routes to understanding Caribbean society and culture. Emphasis will be placed on masquerade as students consider how it provides access to understanding the historical narrative in the Caribbean, as well as debates surrounding Caribbean identity/ties. A pan-Caribbean approach will be adopted allowing students to analyse a variety of traditional, community, religious, and national festivals within the region and the diaspora.

CLTR2401 Popular Culture and Consciousness in 20th Century South Africa
This course examines the forms and institutions of popular culture in South Africa as these emerged in a context of political resistance.

CLTR2405 Religion and Ritual in Contemporary Africa
This course is designed to introduce students to African religious practices. The purpose is to examine initiation rites, ceremonies and rituals that mark the social transformation of individuals within specific African societies. It further examines the ways in which religious practices serve to mediate the negotiations of traditional and contemporary African life. Case studies and films from different regions will anchor discussions of the cultural, socio-political, psychological, historical and economic dimensions of rituals and religious life in Africa.

CLTR2500 Introduction to Caribbean Cultural Studies
This course intends to introduce students to the main cultural practices in the Caribbean and to relate them to the study of culture in general and the Caribbean in particular. Students will be expected to analyse the impact of race, class and gender experiences in Caribbean cultural practices, and to interpret cultural expression in its broadest political sense. Students will also be expected to show familiarity with the leading intellectual interpretations of Caribbean culture.

Level III

CLTR3100 Theorising Caribbean Culture
This course allows students to interrogate key theories employed, in the examination of Caribbean culture. Theorists such as Benitez Rojo, Edouard Glissant, Kamau Brathwaite, Eudine Barriteau, Rhoda Reddock, Shalani Puri, Rex Nettleford, Frantz Fanon and Maureen Warner-Lewis will be examined. Students will analyse the writings of cultural theorists, sociologists, historians, political scientist, poets, novelists, calypsonians, reggae and dancehall artists as they seek to understand how these individuals have defined the Caribbean and have helped to shape our understanding of Caribbean culture and identity.
CLTR3101 Race, Nationalism and Culture
This course examines the idea of race and nationalism from a cultural studies perspective. Critical attention will be given to the intersection between discourses of race and nationalism, and their linkages to global economic exploitation. The relationship between imperialism and understandings of cultural sovereignty fashioned by the anti-colonial intelligentsia is a key feature of the course. Close attention will be paid to the connection between the rise of both the modern state and the concept of race, as well as race as representation.

CLTR3102 Exhibiting Culture
This course examines processes and issues related to the public display of culture. It seeks to theorize the political economy of exhibiting and performing cultures across a range of diverse settings including: world fairs, museum venues, cultural festivals, art galleries, tourist floor shows, trade fairs, and theme parks. Topics will include the history of such displays and associated institutions, the relationship between these institutions and their communities, the differences among the distinct exhibitionary frames, the patterns of consumption and production, and the diverse communicative processes involved in interpreting and experiencing the display and performance of culture.

CLTR3103 Black Popular Culture
This course examines ideas, performances and depictions of black popular culture from the beginning of the twentieth century into the early twenty-first century. Special emphasis will be placed on analysing key events and movements in the history of African diaspora popular culture. Additionally, public and textual criticism, and audience reception of a variety of African diaspora images and representations in popular literature, music, film, television, and art will constitute the focus of the course.

CLTR3110 The Sacred Arts of the Black Atlantic
This course examines the aesthetics and performative dimensions of Black Atlantic sacred expressions. In its interdisciplinary treatment of the diverse African-derived ritual traditions of the Caribbean, Brazil and the Southern United States, emphasis is placed on the complex interplay of continuity and change in the forms, beliefs and iconography of syncretic performance-based religions.

CLTR 3200 Brazilian Film
The aim of this course is to provide a thorough knowledge base of the Brazilian film production of the last decades, inserting and understanding it in a context where aspects of Brazilian History and Culture are considered at the same time. Topics will include a brief History of the Brazilian Film and an analysis of different tendencies in Brazilian cinema, dividing the selected films into thematic groups.

CLTR3500 Discourses in Cultural Studies
The course is intended to introduce students to the expanse of the Cultural Studies disciplinary terrain, its methods of inquiry, its contribution and essential nature. This will be achieved by close examination of the process of institutionalization and the spread of Cultural Studies throughout the northern and southern hemispheres.

CO-CURRICULAR (COCR)
Level II
COCR2040 Foreign Language Theatre in Performance
Participation in the UWI Theatre Festival in foreign languages will provide students with the opportunity to develop skills that are not easily acquired in the classroom. They will experience the oral performative dimension of language through stage performance, and develop an appreciation for the dramatic arts as a mode of communication, a capacity for teamwork and the ability to communicate effectively with foreign language speakers.
COMMUNICATIONS STUDIES (COMS)

Level I

COMS1101 Human Communication I
This course provides students with an overview of the discipline and an understanding of the role theory plays in the study of communication. Students are introduced to different ways of thinking about communication as influenced by cultural, historical and academic perspectives.

COMS1104 Introduction to Public Speaking
The skills of effective speaking and listening will not only enhance the personal communication skills of students but will also improve their marketability. Effective speaking skills are necessary in almost every field of modern endeavour. This course is intended to help students develop and improve their skills in public speaking.

COMS2104 Advanced Technical Writing
Prerequisites COMS1101, COMS2901
Technical writing focuses on aspects of writing that are important in the fields of science, technology and business. This is an intensive writing course aimed at developing skills in writing technical communication. It focuses on style and tone in professional contexts, document layout and design and critical technical documents such as reports, user manuals, product descriptions, white papers, instructions, accident reports and organizational policies and procedures. The course is designed to further develop skills in writing in professional contexts and to stimulate students’ interests in advanced writing as well as to improve students’ proficiency in these areas.

COMS2201 Intercultural Communication
Prerequisite COMS2201
This course explores issues related to the intercultural communication process. It will examine the important role of social, cultural, and historical contexts in intercultural interactions. More specifically, the course examines the complex relationship between culture and communication from three conceptual perspectives: the social psychological perspective, the interpretive perspective, and the critical perspective.

COMS2600 Communication and Caribbean Society
Prerequisite COMS 1101
This course seeks to introduce students to the complexities of the society within which they function as writers/news writers and message consumers and to help them analyse what is needed to communicate effectively. It examines the various factors that affect how news is reported and the impact that it has on readers/listeners. Students will explore how their own cultural backgrounds and experiences influence the messages that they send.

COMS2901 Communication Theory
Prerequisites: COMS 1101, COMS 1104
This course introduces students to the essential features of current theories that seek to cast light on the communication process and to stimulate the application of these theories outside of the classroom. It will establish an integrative framework within which to study each theory and discover interrelations between them. Students are expected to research, analyse and explain specific theories with the goal of gaining a better understanding of the communicative process.

COMS2902 Communication Research Methods
Prerequisites: COMS2902
Students will explore the range of quantitative and qualitative and mixed methodologies used in conducting communication research and examine the advantages and limitations of various approaches to designing a research project. During the course students will plan, design, and report on a research project as part of their practical experience in researching communication.

COMS3000 Writing for the Mass Media: News Writing
Prerequisites: Any 2 Level II COMS courses
This course provides an introduction to writing news for print, broadcast and online media. The focus will be on teaching the tenets of journalistic style, including the mechanics of grammar, spelling, punctuation and specific methods of journalism writing. Students will practise the skills of good media writing by exploring the forms and processes that constitute sound media writing.

COMS3001 Communication for Business
Effective business communication plays a major role in every business enterprise. Successful communication skills and strategies can be taught and practised. This course focuses on the types of writing which form the core of everyday business activities as well as on situations which require employees to use their oral communication skills, such as interviews and meetings. It aims to improve the communication skills by making persons sensitive to the wide range of audiences with which they must interact and to give them strategies for communicating effectively on a wide range of topics and to fulfil different purposes.

DANCE (DANC)

(Courses Administered by the EBCCI)

Level I

DANC1301 Introduction to Dance
Creative Arts
This is a foundation course, which is designed to develop an awareness and appreciation of dance in its artistic, social and cultural contexts. The course introduces students to dance history, anatomy and composition. Students develop fundamental movement and dance skills as well as critical skills by viewing and experiencing dance performance.

Level II

DANC2301 Dance Technique - (6 credits)
Prerequisite: DANC1301
Creative Arts
This is the first section of a two-semester course, which aims to develop the art and discipline of contemporary Caribbean dance through a focus on technical skills, expanded vocabulary and movement capability. It explores a Caribbean aesthetic through movement improvisation as performance technique and group composition. Students undergo systematic exercises, movement sequences and movement exploration with a view to developing their own artistic voice and engaging Caribbean expressive forms.

DANC2303 Modern Dance
Prerequisite: DANC2301
Creative Arts
This course explores the aesthetics of modern dance through intensive studio experiences, viewing performances and study of dance history, theory and literature. It examines the philosophical background and assumptions that inform important contributions to the development of modern dance ideas in the 20th century as well as their articulation through dance.

Level III

DANC3301 Choreography
Prerequisite: DANC2303
Creative Arts
This is an advanced course which focuses on dance creation and expression. It allows students to explore the creative process and the aesthetics of dance. This course examines dance as aesthetic expression focusing on form, structure, space and rhythm in composition and choreography. It explores the creative process, dance making and the execution of choreographic elements. Students create solo and duet pieces and produce an original choreographic project.

DANC3302 Dance Education
Prerequisite: DANC2303
Creative Arts
This is an advanced course, which explores the teaching of dance in schools and community settings in the Caribbean. It explores a wide range of skills used in dance teacher education. Students examine the literature, practice and pedagogical strategies of dance education in school and community settings, particularly as it relates to social and cultural development of the Caribbean.

DANC3303 Dance Ensemble - (6 credits)
Prerequisite: DANC2303
Creative Arts
This is a two-semester advanced course, which provides professional experiences as part of a performing dance ensemble of the EBCCI. It helps students build technical and performance skills through exposure to increasingly complex performance material under the supervision of faculty and guest choreographers in performing repertory works. Students expand their understanding of dance composition and identify individual areas of artistic interest with continued opportunities for creative development in production roles that include: stage management, lighting design, sound design and backstage crew.
EDUCATION (ED)

The purpose of this course is to provide an introduction to the study of education as an institution which affects and is affected by other major institutions in society by providing students with an understanding of the major theoretical perspectives in the Sociology of Education; the concept of education and national development; the determinants of academic achievement; and teaching as a ‘profession’.

EDSS3200 Issues in Social Studies Curriculum and Instruction
The purpose of this course is to address issues in social studies education that are not currently covered in existing courses and, at the same time, to capture current thinking and areas of emphasis in social education. The course attempts to bridge the current more theoretical offerings of the social studies program with more practical areas related to the teaching of social studies.

EDTE3404 Issues in Teacher Education
The purpose of this course is to enable the students to examine critically the basic issues, assumptions, and problems in teacher preparation programmes in the Eastern Caribbean; to develop the skills and competencies necessary for the planning, implementation and evaluation of teacher preparation programmes; and to administer aspects of pre-service and in-service teacher preparation programmes in a Caribbean context.

EDTK3304 Media and Technology in Education
Students need opportunities for experiences that promote visual competency. To achieve this, teachers must recognize the increasing role of technology in out-of-school communication and embrace a wider range of technologies in fostering active student learning in the classroom. The activities in this course will raise the level of comfort of teachers with different media.

FILM (FILM)

Level I

FILM1000 Introduction to Film
This course provides an introduction to the cinema as an institution and film as an art. It focuses on the film as text and the practice of film-making, paying particular attention to elements of film form, cinematic expression, mise-en-scene, narrative structure and narration.

FILM1010 Cinematic Expression
Prerequisite: FILM1000
The course is an introduction to audiovisual culture, exploring principles of design, elements of film art and photography, and how they construct meaning and convey emotion. It is designed to provide students with an understanding of film art as a product of society and as a mechanism for change. Students will be required to apply their knowledge to practical design projects. Basic photographic and film production skills will be developed.

Level II

FILM2000 Caribbean Film
Prerequisite: FILM1000
Creative Arts - Moving Picture Arts
The course will study seminal feature films and documentaries by such filmmakers as Perry Henzell, Humberto Solas, Euzhan Palcy, Felix de Rooy, Raoul Peck, as well as a number of new and young filmmakers, many working in video. The films will reflect the diversity of the region and its diaspora, and will include films in French, Dutch, Spanish, English and Creole. The course will explore representations of race, culture and landscape, migration and nation, as well as the impact of history, economics and politics of the region on the development of Caribbean cinema. This course is currently taught in the Department of Language, Linguistics and Literature at Cave Hill.

FILM2010 History and Theory of Cinematic Forms
Prerequisite: FILM1000
This course introduces students to the major theories of film and their relationship to critical practice. It will provide students with knowledge of the history and theory of cinematic forms such as film and digital media in order to establish a critical and historical context for the study of film. The development of moving picture art is examined through lectures, readings and screenings of important works that will help students navigate a variety of important conceptual models and critical approaches to the study of film. Students will analyse film as an art form, a communications tool and an entertainment source.

FILM2103 Documentary
Prerequisite: FILM2115
Creative Arts - Moving Picture Arts
This course has a dual purpose: first, to examine the theoretical, historical, ethical and aesthetic context of documentary practice; and second, to produce group documentary projects as a means of allowing students to explore personally the range of issues and challenges that documentary filmmakers face.

FILM2104 Production Management
Prerequisite: FILM2110
Creative Arts - Moving Picture Arts
This course explores all aspects of the work of the producer from pre-production planning, through production and post-production. Students assume the role of a producer responsible for creating or acquiring a story idea and developing it through conceptualization, budgeting, treatment, proposal, funding, scheduling, outreach, marketing and distribution.

FILM2110 Production Tools
Prerequisite: FILM1000
Creative Arts - Moving Picture Arts
This course builds on the knowledge gained in Introduction to Film. It introduces students to intermediate production skills, concepts, tools and techniques for film and digital video. It examines technical and aesthetic elements, proper use, professional practice and the logistics of the film shoot.

FILM2115 Cinematography
Prerequisite: FILM2110
Creative Arts - Moving Picture Arts
This course examines the theoretical and practical work of the director of photography. Students learn about the raw materials of the photographic process, the proper operation of cameras, lights and ancillary equipment, field production techniques. They gain experience in lighting, filming and audio recording to create effective stories. The course expands on basic video and film lighting techniques, technical considerations and aesthetics of lighting.

FILM2801 Fundamentals of Story and Narration
Prerequisite: FILM1000
Creative Arts - Writing
This is an introductory course, which provides students with a comprehensive understanding of the nature of storytelling, story forms as well as the cultural function and significance of stories. The course focuses on how different cultures organize and narrate their stories, paying particular attention to story traditions in Caribbean culture. Students learn how to craft stories, analyse and critique story forms for use in contemporary performing and creative arts.

FILM2802 Writing for Stage and Screen
Prerequisite: FILM2801 or THEA2210
Creative Arts - Writing
This course examines fundamental elements of writing for stage and screen paying particular attention to dramatic structure, storytelling techniques, film language, genre, cinematic rendering character and thematic development as well as techniques for writing effective dialogue. Students analyse and discuss successful screenplay mechanics as well as write their own short plays.

Level III

FILM3100 The Emergence of Cinema and the Rise of Nation
Prerequisites: FILM1000 and FILM1010
This course looks at the emergence of cinema up to the post-World War Two era. It foregrounds the debates about realism and fantasy, soviet cinema and its relationship to communist state and socialist realism. It will look specifically at the relationship between German Expressionism and the growth of fascism, the emergence of neo-realism and the early period of Hollywood and its ideologies and its perpetuation of the star system. As an entry into European modernism, it will look at the importance of cinema in the shaping of European nationalisms.

FILM3102 Post-Production Editing and Sound
Prerequisite: FILM2115
Creative Arts - Moving Picture Arts
This course examines the theoretical, technical and artistic aspects of editing digital video and audio. It emphasizes editing as an art and a vehicle for effective communication and development of story ideas. Students explore a variety of editing styles and techniques.

FILM3105 Directing
Prerequisite: FILM2115
Creative Arts - Moving Picture Arts
This course examines the work of the director in film and digital media, focusing on the development of aesthetic values, cinematic languages and advanced interpretative cinematographic skills. It focuses on directorial decision-making, visual storytelling, plot development, scene continuity, dramatic interpretation and use of narrative structures. The course also explores the role of the director as a team leader in pre-production, production and post-production.

FILM3115 Digital Media Workshop - (6 credits)
Prerequisite: FILM2110
Creative Arts - Moving Picture Arts  - Semester I & II

GENDER (GEND)

(Courses Administered by the Institute for Gender & Development Studies)

Level I

GEND1103 Theoretical Concepts and Sources of Knowledge
This is a survey course that introduces first year students to three strands of feminist analysis: theory, method and popular knowledge. The course provides students with an introduction to the core concepts within Women’s Studies such as feminism, gender, women’s studies, patriarchy, consciousness-raising, feminist backlash, first, second and third wave feminism.

GEND1301 Feminist Theology: An Introduction
This course introduces the main strands of feminist theology, its relevance within the feminist movement and its impact within the Christian religious tradition. During the course students will examine these theologies used to analyse the historical androcentric constructions in Christian religion, and will evaluate their relevance to understanding the realities of women and men in the Caribbean. Open to students of all levels.

Level II

GEND2005 Crimes by and against Women: Theories, Evidence & Popular Portrayals
This course examines a range of violent crimes involving women from the perspective of gender. Throughout the course, students will compare portrayals of these forms of violence with the various theoretical perspectives and empirical research that attempt to explain why these crimes occur.

GEND2006 Gender and Religion
This course builds upon the Feminist Theology course, and focuses on the analysis from a feminist perspective on Christian biblical teaching. During the course students will distinguish between the continued source of empowerment that the biblical scriptures have for Christian followers, and androcentric interpretations of women’s role and participation/exclusion in society.

GEND2110 Gender and Caribbean Economic Relations
The course examines the emergence, evolution and interaction in the field of Gender and Caribbean Economy. It is specifically interested in the intersection of gender analysis and Caribbean economic development.

GEND2201 Women’s Studies: An Introduction to Feminist Theories
The primary objective of this course is to examine and interrogate the various feminist theories used to analyse conditions affecting women and to evaluate their relevance to understanding the experience of women in the Caribbean.

GEND2202 Women’s Studies 11: Women and Development in the Caribbean
This course builds upon the feminist theories introduced in the course (GEND2201). The objective is to begin to evaluate critically the diverse experiences of Caribbean women as represented in history, politics and political participation, education, literature, religion and social policy and to relate these whenever possible to the development strategies pursued in the Caribbean.

GEND2501 Women, Leadership and Change in Developing Countries
This course analyses the issue of power, leadership and authority from the perspective of gender, the strategies of women’s leadership that contribute to altering controversial barriers and produce benefits for men and women. It examines the contributions of women in developing countries whose domestic, professional and public activities have transformed communities at the local and global levels.
GEND 2002: Gender in Caribbean Culture II
This course examines the social meanings and representations of gender in Caribbean culture through the examination of scholarly work, literature and popular culture (e.g. calypso, dancehall, carnival, sports, etc.). From an interdisciplinary perspective it explores the historical roots and contemporary manifestations of gendered identities within a diverse, syncretic and ever changing Caribbean cultural terrain. It considers how culturally defined gender ‘norms’ intersect with other social variables such as race, class, sexuality, etc. in defining the collective and individual identities of men and women. The course also explores how gender roles and relations based on hierarchal power relations between, and among, men and women are practised or performed in areas of the family, work, media and the body.

Level III

GEND3701 Men and Masculinities in the Caribbean: Theoretical Perspective
Prerequisite (one of): GEND2201, GEND2202, PSYC3013
This course will examine and evaluate the four main theoretical approaches to studying masculinity and their relevance to understanding the experience of Caribbean men. The responses of the men’s movement will be examined.

GEND3702 Men and Masculinities in the Caribbean: Contemporary Issues
Prerequisite (one of): GEND2201, GEND2202, GEND3701, PSYC3013
This course will examine the various expressions of Caribbean masculinities and their implications for Caribbean men, women and society. The responses of the men’s movement to issues affecting men will also be examined.

GEND3703 Feminist Critiques of Development Theories: Implications for Policy & Planning
The course examines the neo-Marxist and the neo-classical schools of economic thought and the modernization approach to development from the perspective of gender. It traces how the modernisation paradigm has informed development planning in the Caribbean and explores the corresponding differential development of social and economic policy affecting women and men in the Caribbean.

GEND3705 Gender and Sexuality
This course critically examines the historical androcentric constructions of sexuality. The course will explore the historical, medical and sociological approaches to human sexuality. It will demonstrate how women’s and men’s sexualities are viewed differently and how this difference empowers and disempowers both sexes. It will examine how sexuality is constructed across a variation of sexual identities.

Prerequisite: HIST1801 and HIST2801
This course focuses on geo-informatics and its applications in archaeology. Geo-informatics is the science and technology of the acquisition, processing and application of information with a geographic or spatial component. The course will cover the entire process of collecting geo-information and transforming this into a geo-information product like a visualisation or a decision support system.
HUMANITIES (HUMN)

Level I

HUMN1001 Critical Foundations in the Arts
Creative Arts - History, Theory & Criticism
This course introduces students to the arts as a mode of inquiry. It seeks to enrich the student’s understanding of the arts and the experience of the arts. It uses an interdisciplinary approach, which provides the basic knowledge and skills necessary for advanced study in the arts. Students learn the vocabulary, terminology and methodology of the arts paying particular attention to issues of aesthetics in art criticism, history and theory.

Level II

HUMN2301 Caribbean Literature and Political Ideology
Interdisciplinary
This interdisciplinary course will introduce students to the connectedness between selected Caribbean prose fiction texts and aspects of political ideology in the Caribbean.

HUMN2302 Literature and the Colonial Encounter
Interdisciplinary
This course examines literary and dramatic responses to the colonial experience with reference to selected texts.

HUMN2603 Caribbean History, Culture and Identity
Interdisciplinary
This course examines what it means at present to have a ‘Caribbean identity’.

HUMN2702 African and Caribbean Women Writers
Interdisciplinary
This course is intended as an introduction to prose fiction by women writers from West Africa and the Caribbean. The course is not directed exclusively at specialists in literature or women’s studies.

HUMN2703 Quest for Caribbean Identity
Interdisciplinary
This course explores the treatment of the overlapping concerns of racial, cultural and national identity in the Caribbean novel.

HUMN2801 African Writing and its Oral Context
Interdisciplinary
This interdisciplinary (French and English) course provides a general introduction to the oral aesthetic which underpins all African contemporary cultural forms. The course will therefore introduce students to the main forms of traditional orature - ritual, praising, epic, proverbs, storytelling - both for their own sake, and to demonstrate the way these provide the ground for a specifically African aesthetic. Because traditional orature is inseparable from performance, filmed dramatisations will be as important as written text.

Level III

HUMN3001 Aesthetics, Theory and Criticism -
(6 credits)
Prerequisite: FILM2010 or THEA2002
Creative Arts - Semester I & II
This is a two-semester course, which provides a theoretical and methodological context for advanced critical study and practice of the arts. Part one presents an introduction to primary issues of aesthetics and the philosophy of art and examines the critique of traditional aesthetics; part two focuses on the application of theory and methodology to criticism and interpretation of the arts. The course also examines central questions in Caribbean arts and aesthetics.

HUMN3099 Caribbean Studies - (6 credits)
Faculty Requirement - Semester I & II
In the final year of their degree programme, undergraduates reading for the BA are required to investigate some topic relating to the Caribbean, and to report the results in the form of a paper, except where permission has been given to substitute two approved alternative courses for Caribbean Studies. The topic chosen for the Study, which must not be wholly identical with Faculty coursework undertaken by the student, must normally be chosen from the student’s major area of study and must be approved by the Moderator in Caribbean studies on the campus.

HUMN3900 Internship
Prerequisite: Permission of the Director, EBCCI
Creative Arts
This course is designed to provide practical on-the-job experiences in planning, production, operation, marketing and performance to complement in-class coursework.
HUMN3901 Capstone/Thesis Project - (6 credits)
Creative Arts - Semester I & II
This year-long course will involve the production of a strong, well constructed, compelling work of art in film, theatre, writing and/or dance exhibiting the student’s unique voice and style. Students will work in teams and will be expected to participate in a minimum of two projects. Students will work in a variety of roles: one will be a major role and the other a minor role. The lecturer must approve all roles and projects. The students will work under close supervision of the lecturer and be expected to make class presentations and provide a journal of their activities.

LINGUISTICS (LING)

Level I

LING1001 Introduction to Phonetics and Phonology (Replaces LING1401 and LING1402)
This course introduces students to the principles of acoustic and articulatory phonetics and the fundamentals of phonemic analysis. It looks at the human anatomy and physiology used in the articulation of speech sounds. At the end of the course students will be able to carry out transcriptions and phonemic analyses of language data.

LING1002 Introduction to Morphology and Syntax (Replaces LING1401 and LING1402)
This course introduces students to the formal approaches to the structure of words (Morphology) and sentences (Syntax) in English and other languages. At the end of the course students will be able to identify various types of morphemes, perform morphological analyses, represent phrases and sentences in syntactic tree structures in a variety of languages.

LING1003 Essentials of English Grammar
This course is designed to enable students to identify and discriminate the relationship between structure and meaning in English; to examine English structure along traditional grammatical lines; and to have a grammatical vocabulary with which to approach other kinds of structural analysis.

LING1005 Introduction to Language (Replaces LING1401 and LING1402)
This course is a general introduction to language. Without examining the technical aspects of the discipline of linguistics, the course looks at the arbitrary nature of language, its uniqueness to humans, its variation, and the application of language to make a difference to people’s everyday life.

LING1301 Language and Communication in the Caribbean I
This course sensitizes students to the principal language varieties used in the communicative network of Caribbean speech communities, viz. the standard variety and the mass vernacular. Attention is focused on language use in traditional informal contexts in both the anglophone and non-anglophone territories; majority and minority languages in the Caribbean region, language and oral traditions and language and cultural identity.

Level II

LING2004 Semantics
Prerequisite: LING1001, LING1002 and LING1005 (or LING1401 and LING1402)
This course examines the field of semantics, i.e. basic concepts such as meaning as a property of expressions abstracted from situations, speakers and hearers. The topics will include: basic concepts - reference, universe of discourse, sense, semantics vs syntax, and semantics vs pragmatics.

LING2007 Pragmatics
This course deals with meaning as it varies in different contexts. The focus is on language in communication or on meaning in relation to speaker situation.

LING2099 Research Methods in Linguistics
Prerequisite: LING1001, LING1002 and LING1005 (or LING1401 and LING1402)
This course is intended to provide students of Linguistics with the skills necessary to achieve the required standard for research papers in this discipline.
LING2101 Language Acquisition
Prerequisite: LING1001, LING1002 and LING1005 (or LING1401 and LING1402)
This course explores the research on the processes by which children acquire their first languages naturally. It also deals with second language acquisition and the theories of second language learning.

LING2102 Language Learning and Teaching
Prerequisite: LING2101
This course explores approaches to and the sociolinguistic context of the learning and teaching English and foreign languages in the Caribbean and elsewhere.

LING2301 The Sociology of Language
Prerequisite: LING1005 (or LING1401 and LING1402)
This course covers a range of types of language situations, for example, bilingual, multilingual, diglossic, Creole continuum etc. It also looks at the range of functions that particular languages can perform in a speech community, for example, official, standard, private, public, etc. The course is supported by references to case studies from language situations around the world.

LING2302 Sociolinguistics
Prerequisite: LING1001, LING1002 and LING1005 (or LING1401 and LING1402)
This course defines and examines fundamental sociolinguistic premises necessary for a non-biased look at the cognitive and social functions of language varieties, the correlation of linguistic and non-linguistic factors, socio-linguistics in the West Indian context and the notion of communicative competence.

LING2402 English Language Structure
Prerequisites: LING1001, LING1002 and LING1003 (or LING1401 and LING1402)
This course is designed to identify the basic structural elements operating in the language system called English; it introduces students to a generalized theoretical framework within which these basic structural elements can be analysed and described and sensitises students to the varied relationships between structure and meaning that exist in the English language.

LING2501 Language, Gender and Society
This course introduces students to gender differentiation in language and language use and provides insights into the problems of interaction between the sexes.

LING2801 Phonology
Prerequisites: LING1001, LING1002 and LING1005 (or LING1401 and LING1402)
This course is aimed at providing students with the fundamentals in both the theory and practice of phonology. Students will build on the phonetic knowledge and skills acquired in LING1001. They will acquire the skills for analysing phonological data and for further studies in the field of phonology.

LING2802 Syntax
Prerequisites: LING1001, LING1002 and LING1005 (or LING1401 and LING1402)
This course not only builds on the syntactic knowledge and skills acquired in LING1002, but is also aimed at providing students with the structural foundations of generative syntax.

LING2899 French Lexicon Creole
Prerequisites: LING1001, LING1002 (or LING1401 and LING1402)
The course is designed both as a foreign language course and as one in structure of the language. Students will be trained in oral and written expression and comprehension as well as being instructed in the structure of the language. Problems of orthography, standardization and instrumentalisation will also be discussed.

Level III

LING3005 Study of Caribbean Words
Prerequisites: LING2004 (and some knowledge of either French or Spanish).
This course is designed to introduce the study of the morphosemantics and morphosyntax of a selection of Caribbean English words and phrases according to chosen topics, but will also engage in a comparative analysis of words in other Caribbean languages, such as French Creole and Spanish. The word formation processes at work, in addition to the semantic shifts and extensions found in multilingual Caribbean Creoles will be examined, as they relate to the further chronicling of the Caribbean lexicon.
LING3006 The Making of Caribbean Glossaries
Prerequisites: LING3005 (and some knowledge of either French or Spanish).
This course will focus on preparing students to produce basic glossaries of Caribbean languages under specific topics geared to their interests, such as music, dance, sports, etc. by introducing them to the basic principles of chronicling language, with specific reference to Caribbean languages. Reference skills will be developed through looking at relevant semantic concepts and through practical exercises.

LING3102 Teaching English as a Foreign Language
Prerequisites: LING2101 and LING3103
This course will focus on the approaches and methods used to teach English as a second language. This course will evaluate current methodology and explore methods and approaches that are appropriate for different age levels. Emphasis will be placed on developing basic interpersonal communication skills and cognitive academic language proficiency in learners of L2, and the focus will be on developing oral and written communication and reading abilities.

LING3103 The Teaching of English
Prerequisites: LING2102
This course will focus on theoretical and practical considerations of teaching English to native speakers in a formal setting. Emphasis will be placed on the relevance and appropriateness of methods of teaching the language. The relevance of grammar instruction to the development of writing abilities will be explored and special emphasis placed on the methodology of grammatical instruction in the language programme.

LING3201 Caribbean Dialectology
Prerequisites: LING1001, LING1002 and LING1005 (or LING1401 and LING1402)
This course takes an in-depth look at the socio-historical background and development of Caribbean dialects and languages. It provides detailed description and analysis of contemporary Caribbean Creole language structure. It examines the linguistic structure of the Creole continuum and pays attention to the structure of non-Creole Caribbean languages.

LING3202 Creole Linguistics
Prerequisites: LING1001, LING1002 and LING1005 (or LING1401 and LING1402)
This course begins by dealing with the validity of the term, Creole, the phenomenon of creolisation. It goes on to look at de-creolisation in the context of theories of language change and language acquisition. It finishes by examining the impact of Creole language studies on general linguistic theory.

LING3301 Pragmatics of Discourse
Prerequisites: LING2007
The goal of this course is to provide students with practical experience in analysing natural discourse used in everyday contexts so that they may understand better how speaker intent is encoded in language. The course also addresses how both linguistic knowledge and socio-cultural background knowledge may interact in interpersonal communication (whether spoken or written) and how these factors assist in discourse interpretation.

LING3501 Social and Linguistic History of the Caribbean
Prerequisites: LING1005 and HIST1004
This course is designed to introduce students to the historical factors that account for the social and linguistic profile of the Caribbean. It looks at the relationship between migration and language as a general human phenomenon, presenting historical examples from Europe and Africa to demonstrate this relationship. It looks at the history, social organisation, languages and cultures of the indigenous peoples of the Caribbean. It goes on to look at the society.

LITERATURES IN ENGLISH (LITS)

Level I

LITS1001 Introduction to Poetry
The study of samples of poetry in English from various cultures and periods designed to promote an understanding of how poetry works and competence in practical criticism.

LITS1002 Introduction to Prose Fiction
An introduction to the history and development of, as well as critical concepts necessary for analysing, prose fiction.

LITS3501 Advanced Seminar in West Indian Literature
Prerequisite: B+ in LITS2501, or LITS2502, or LITS2514, or LITS2516
For students who want to deepen their knowledge of West Indian literature by researching topics of current scholarly interest and developments in related literary theory. The focus varies from year to year, and may involve topics such as ‘West Indian autobiography,’ ‘migration and the West Indian diaspora’ or ‘post-colonial constructions in West Indian literature.’ This course is one of the approved Level III substitutes for HUMN3099 Caribbean Studies.

LITS3502 West Indian Literature: Special Author Seminar
Prerequisite: B+ in LITS2501, or LITS2502, or LITS2514, or LITS2516
For students who want to do intensive research on the work of a single West Indian Writer. This course is one of the approved Level III substitutes for HUMN3099 Caribbean Studies.

LITS3601 African Literature I: the Aesthetics of African Literature
Prerequisite: LITS2306
An introduction to classics of the African canon, alongside newer, experimental writing. Underlying the course is the question of what we mean by ‘African.’ This course is one of the approved Level III substitutes for HUMN3099 Caribbean Studies.
LITS3602 African Literature II: African Narrative in Film and Text
A counterpart to LITS3601, this course examines the nature of African narrative, its debt to orality and its innovations, by comparing filmic and written texts. This course is one of the approved Level III substitutes for HUMN3099 Caribbean Studies.

LITS3603 African Film
An introduction to the cinemas of Africa as well as to film language and critical concepts. We examine the inter-textuality of filmic narrative techniques with indigenous African (oral) narrative forms, to be able to relate these to an African film aesthetic. This course is one of the approved Level III substitutes for HUMN3099 Caribbean Studies.

MUSIC (MUSC)

Level I

MUSC1010 Introduction to Critical Listening
This course introduces students to elements of music, musical style and the major musical forms. It examines the structure and composition of music with an emphasis on learning to become an active listener. Students will become familiar with important musical terminology, forms and instruments in order to better understand, enjoy and talk critically about music.

MUSC1020 Caribbean Popular Music and Society
Prerequisite: MUSC1010
Popular music has a prominent place in Caribbean culture. Drawing on folk and traditional music it often provides socio-political commentary on Caribbean societies, and in many instances, is associated with distinctive dance styles. Through its focus on listening and analysis, this course provides an opportunity for students to explore Caribbean popular music and to understand its structures, particular eras and stylistic differences.

Level II

MUSC2000 General Musicianship
Prerequisite: MUSC1020
This course introduces students to the fundamentals of basic musicianship and focuses on aural training, sight-reading and music theory while exploring the melodic, rhythmic and harmonic materials of Caribbean music.

MUSC2100 Composing in Caribbean Popular Genres
This course seeks to develop skills and interest in composing. It also aims to foster an experience of the process of composing and thereby allows students to personally contribute to the development of Caribbean popular music as composers/performers and as an informed audience.

MUSC2400 Knowing Popular Music Through Performance (6 credits)
This year long course is based on the premise that the performance of popular genres is a necessary skill for any musician operating in the Caribbean or world music fields. How these genres are constructed and presented is required knowledge for all musicians whether their focus is performance or education. This knowledge is best acquired through individual performance in an ensemble context as the popular music is grounded in live group playing.

MUSC3000 The Music Industry
How the music industry works is indispensable knowledge for all musicians. The modern musician is as much involved in the business world as he is in the artistic world. This course provides an overview of the music industry and includes topics such as copyright and intellectual law and its application to Caribbean societies, taxation as it relates to cultural industries, legal and financial requirements of show promotion, and marketing and the media.

PHILOSOPHY (PHIL)

Level I

PHIL1002 Introduction to Ethics and Applied Ethics
This course consists of two parts. The first part introduces students to the domain of ethics as the study of theories about how we ought to live, and what is of value or concern in life. The second part takes a more pragmatic approach and attempts to deal with practical applications such as concern for the environment and animals, or issues such as abortion and euthanasia.
PHIL1003 Introduction to Philosophy
The course aims to introduce students to the methods and materials of philosophy through the exploration of certain fundamental philosophical concerns and problems like the nature of mind and personal identity, free will and determinism, and the existence of God.

PHIL1300 Critical Thinking and Informal Logic
This course examines the basic nature of reasoning and focuses on fallacies which obstruct good reasoning. Emphasis will be upon understanding the logical structure of argument and on recognizing the influence of emotional and rhetorical persuasion in media presentations, political discussions, advertisements, general academic writings, and one’s own arguments.

PHIL1903 Greek Philosophy
The course is intended to initiate students into the historical precedence to some of the philosophical issues with reference to ancient Greek Philosophy. The major emphasis will be on Plato and Aristotle. The focus will be mainly on metaphysical and epistemological aspects of certain selected texts by those major classical philosophers.

Level II

PHIL2003 Philosophy of Mind
The question ‘What is it to have a mind?’ forms the focal point in Philosophy of Mind, and the objective of this course is to essay and assay various attempts at answering this question.

PHIL2004 Philosophy of Science
The course aims to study the philosophical underpinning of scientific activity and to scrutinise such issues as: the old and new riddles of induction, the nature of natural laws, the relation between theory and observation, the function and nature of theoretical terms, the concept of confirmation and its paradoxical implications, under-determination of theory by data, theoretical reduction, and realism versus anti-realism in science.

PHIL2100 Symbolic Logic
This course covers the basics of “symbolic” logic, that is, formal logic in which special symbols are used to represent certain logical relationships. The use of such symbols enables one to study the form of good deductive arguments independently from their content. The focus of the course is not on the symbols, but on a rigorous study of the properties of good deductive arguments.

PHIL2200 Crime and Punishment - Issues in Legal Justice
This course explores the twinned themes of crime and punishment. Questions to be addressed include: What is crime? What are the causes of crime? What motivates an individual to commit a crime? Who is responsible for criminal activity? Why is a criminal confession so important? What is punishment? What are the rationales for punishment? What is justice? How does punishment measure against the need for human dignity? What roles do culture, class, and gender play in crime and punishment? What biases does one have about these questions, and how does one present his or her views?

PHIL2210 Human Nature and the Good Life in Society
This course attempts to chart the development of ideas of human nature and the social and political forms appropriate to its flourishing from Plato up to modern times. The course will deal with historically significant writers such as: Plato, Aristotle, Augustine, Aquinas, Hobbes, Locke, Hume, Rousseau, Kant, Mill, and Marx, and will place them in relation to the resurgence of the theory of justice associated with the work of John Rawls and others.

PHIL2605 African Philosophy
This course examines the debate surrounding the history, definition and nature of African Philosophy. It identifies and attempts to answer central questions that most concern contemporary African philosophers. These are questions such as: What is African Philosophy? Is ethno-philosophy really philosophy? Are the contents and methods of African philosophy unique? Can African philosophy and ideas be properly expressed in non-African languages?

PHIL2650 Asian Philosophy
This course will examine the major philosophies and philosophers that have been influential in shaping the minds of Asia. Special attention will be given to Hinduism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Taoism, and Zen-Buddhism. Focus will be on such issues as humanity, justice, self, happiness, authenticity, freedom, harmony, and enlightenment.

PHIL2701 Philosophy in Literature
This course is an examination of a number of central philosophical issues as they are reflected in literary works. Among the issues to be examined are the following: the question of God and the problem of evil; determinism, free will and fatalism; freedom and man’s search for identity; the meaning of life, and the obligation to obey the law.
PHIL2801 Aesthetics
The course is designed not only to introduce students to the study of the nature of beauty which intersects with topics in metaphysics, ethics, philosophy of mind, and philosophy of language, but also the theory of taste and criticism in the creative and performing arts.

PHIL2901 Problems of Knowledge
The course concentrates on the scope and limits of knowledge, its sources and justification. It is divided into two parts. Part 1 focuses on epistemological issues such as scepticism, analysis of knowledge, varieties of cognitive states and the ethics of epistemology. Part 2 deals with methodological questions like the Problem of Induction and in general the status of inductive inferences, the notion of evidence or corroboration and its attendant paradox of confirmation, and the notion of explanation.

PHIL2902 Early Modern Philosophy - Rationalism
This course aims to study what has become known as the school of rationalism in which three philosophers stand out: namely, Descartes, Spinoza and Leibniz. The course covers a selection of subjects from their works with an emphasis on their metaphysical and epistemological aspects.

PHIL2903 Early Modern Philosophy - Empiricism
This course is a sequel to the first course on Modern Philosophy and is designed to study the school of empiricism. Among the empiricists, the works of three figures loom large: Locke, Berkeley and Hume. Again, the course is concerned mainly with epistemological and metaphysical aspects of empiricist and Kantian philosophy.

PHIL2904 Philosophical Logic
The course is not so much about formal logic as about a series of connected and highly important concepts like reference, truth, existence, identity, necessity, and quantification. Philosophical logic is in many respects the workshop of philosophy, and the course aims to introduce students to its methods and materials and also to its implications for other areas in philosophy.

Level III

PHIL3012 Philosophy of Law
This course provides a systematic consideration of the fundamental issues in the conception and practice of law; origins of law, commands and orders; sovereignty and subject; legitimacy and autonomy; laws, ethics and justice; democracy and the law; gender and the law; discrimination and reverse discrimination; war and laws; sanctity of life and law – suicide, capital punishment, cloning, organ transplantation, etc.; and conscience and the law.

PHIL3099 Research in Philosophy - Interrogating Perennial Issues and Great Thinkers in Philosophy - (6 credits)
This course is designed to introduce final year students to research in Philosophy. Through detailed reading of classical and non-classical works in Philosophy, students will develop an understanding of the background to the works of each major author, and be able to identify issues in Philosophy and/or themes in the works of a major philosophical figure. As a culmination of the work in the research course, students will be required to prepare a research paper under supervision of the lecturer for the course, which critically analyse the issues and/or theme of interest to them.

PHIL3110 Environmental Ethics
A critical examination of various moral problems raised when considering environmental issues. Questions regarding the moral status of animals, future generations, and the environment as a whole are explored. Also taken up are the moral aspects of famine relief, population control, and resource use.

PHIL3120 Biomedical Ethics
Bioethics is the critical study of ethical problems arising from medicine, healthcare and the biological sciences. The course will discuss some ethical questions concerning such issues as: abortion, euthanasia, health resource allocation, organ donation, experimentation on humans and animals, medical paternalism, genetically modified food, genetic modification of animals, human cloning, eugenics and designer babies, genetics, refusal of medical treatment.

PHIL3130 Business Ethics
The course analyses moral questions and problems that arise in contemporary business practice. These relate to problems of equality, social and moral responsibility rights of workers, discrimination, etc.
PHIL3500 Philosophy and Gender
“Gender” as practice, performance and representation has differed for women and men according to race, class and other divisions throughout time. This course examines key issues related to the critical study of gender or the cultural invention and representation of masculinity and femininity. The course will also examine competing feminist theories; for example, liberal feminism, Marxist feminism, radical feminism, socialist feminism and others.

PHIL3510 Philosophy of Sex and Love
This course investigates philosophical approaches to love, friendship, marriage, and eroticism in both classical and contemporary philosophy. It involves an investigation of the nature of sex and the nature of love and of the conceptual relationship between sexuality and love. Explored also are the concepts of gender and gender roles, and gender equality. Included is an investigation of social, ethical and legal controversies regarding sexual behaviour, marriage, privacy and metaphysical.

PHIL3520 Kant and the Post-Kantians
This course starts from the attempt by Kant to synthesize elements of rationalism and empiricism in his ‘critical’ philosophy. It considers reactions to Kant’s views by such writers as Hegel and Schopenhauer and concludes with Nietzsche’s rejection of the Kantian project.

PHIL3610 Frege, Husserl and their Progeny
Taking up Kantian themes in the work of Frege, this course examines the shared concerns of Frege and Husserl, and the subsequent division of their interests between ‘analytic’ and ‘continental’ thinkers. In the former group the works of Russell, Wittgenstein and Carnap, in particular, will be discussed, while Heidegger, Sartre, and Merleau-Ponty’s debt to Husserl will be the focus of the other part of the course.

PHIL3801 African Diaspora Philosophy
The course is intended to give an insight into the philosophical heritage of African thought, specifically in terms of its metaphysical and epistemological dimensions. Also, as African and Diasporic Philosophy is still a relatively new discipline and a definite consensus has yet to emerge with regard to its content and contours, the question of identity will be a major concern of the course.

PHIL3802 20th Century Analytic Philosophy
The course is intended to cover some of the major figures of 20th Century Analytic Philosophy. A selection will be made from the work of philosophers like Frege, Russell, Wittgenstein (early and late works), Ayer, Quine, and Carnap. Obviously, due to time limitations, not all of them can be discussed in one semester.

PHIL3803 20th Century Continental Philosophy
The course is intended to cover some of the major figures of 20th Century Continental Philosophy. They include philosophers like Heidegger, Merleau-Ponty, Sartre, Foucault, Derrida and Rorty. Obviously, due to time limitations, not all of them can be discussed in one semester.

PHIL3804 Philosophy of Language
The question of what it is to be meaningful is the central concern of Philosophy of Language and this course aims to canvass attempts at delineating the meaning or meanings of meaning. How does language relate to the mind on the one hand and reality on the other?

PHIL3805 Philosophy of Psychology
Psychology attempts to explain such phenomena as perception, cognition, emotion and language learning. The goal of this course is to find out how such tasks are accomplished by psychology, with an emphasis on its theoretical tenets and methodology. The objective is to enable students to sort out the various ways in which philosophical assumptions appear in, affect, and illuminate psychology, and conversely how psychological insights impress on philosophical problems and positions.

PHIL3806 Cognitive Science Philosophy
Philosophy of cognitive science comes under the umbrella of Philosophical Psychology. Basically, cognitive science is predicated on the idea that the mind, or at least some important mental phenomena, can be understood in computational terms. The course is designed to look at the fundamental conception of computationalism and its various ramifications for topics such as folk psychology, the language of thought, modularity of the mind, linguistics, vision, and the notion of content in causal and explanatory contexts.
PHIL3807 Philosophy of Mathematics
The course is designed to enquire into the concepts of and justification for the principles used in mathematics. The prime question in philosophy of mathematics concerns the status of the subject which can be split into four sub-questions: (1) How do we know that our mathematical theories are true? (2) What is mathematics about? In other words, if a mathematical statement is true, what makes it true? (3) Are mathematical truths true by necessity, and, if so, what is the source of this necessity? (4) How is it possible to apply mathematical truths to external reality, and in what does this application consist? The objective is to initiate students into thinking about these questions in a systematic and consistent way.

PHIL3901 Ethics II: Meta-Ethics
This course is a sequel to Ethics I, and is a reflective examination of first-order ethical decision and judgements, and it is, therefore, referred to as second-order ethics or meta-ethics. It looks at issues like the nature of moral judgements and enquires whether they express genuine beliefs, and whether they can be objectively true.

PHIL3902 19th Century Continental Philosophy
This course, however, concentrates on the 19th century period of Continental Philosophy where five post-Kantian philosophers along with the originators of phenomenology occupy a central place: namely, Hegel, Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, Brentano and Husserl. The course is designed to initiate students into the intricacies of their thoughts and their impact on the subsequent development of Continental Philosophy.

PHIL3903 Metaphysics
All sub-disciplines of philosophy share certain problems about what ultimately exists in the universe. Consideration of such issues constitutes the province of metaphysics. The course aims to provide students with an understanding and means of tackling questions about what there is in reality and how the world works. The following topics are among the issues discussed in the course: appearance and reality, substance and identity, causation and laws, universals and particulars, space and time.
